REGLO LIFTMAN

The Reglo LIFTMAN Air Operated Lift is an autonomic manlift, running on only compressed air.

The lift is fully controlled from the cage. From the control panel in the cage, the operator can drive it forward and backwards, steer it left and right, and of course lift the cage up and down. It's also sometimes referred to as manlift or a pneumatic lift.

It is easy to manoeuvre and very useful in narrow booths where objects might change in form and shape due to various tasks. It can easily be moved around, even without being connected to compressed air – just tow it along to a desired area.

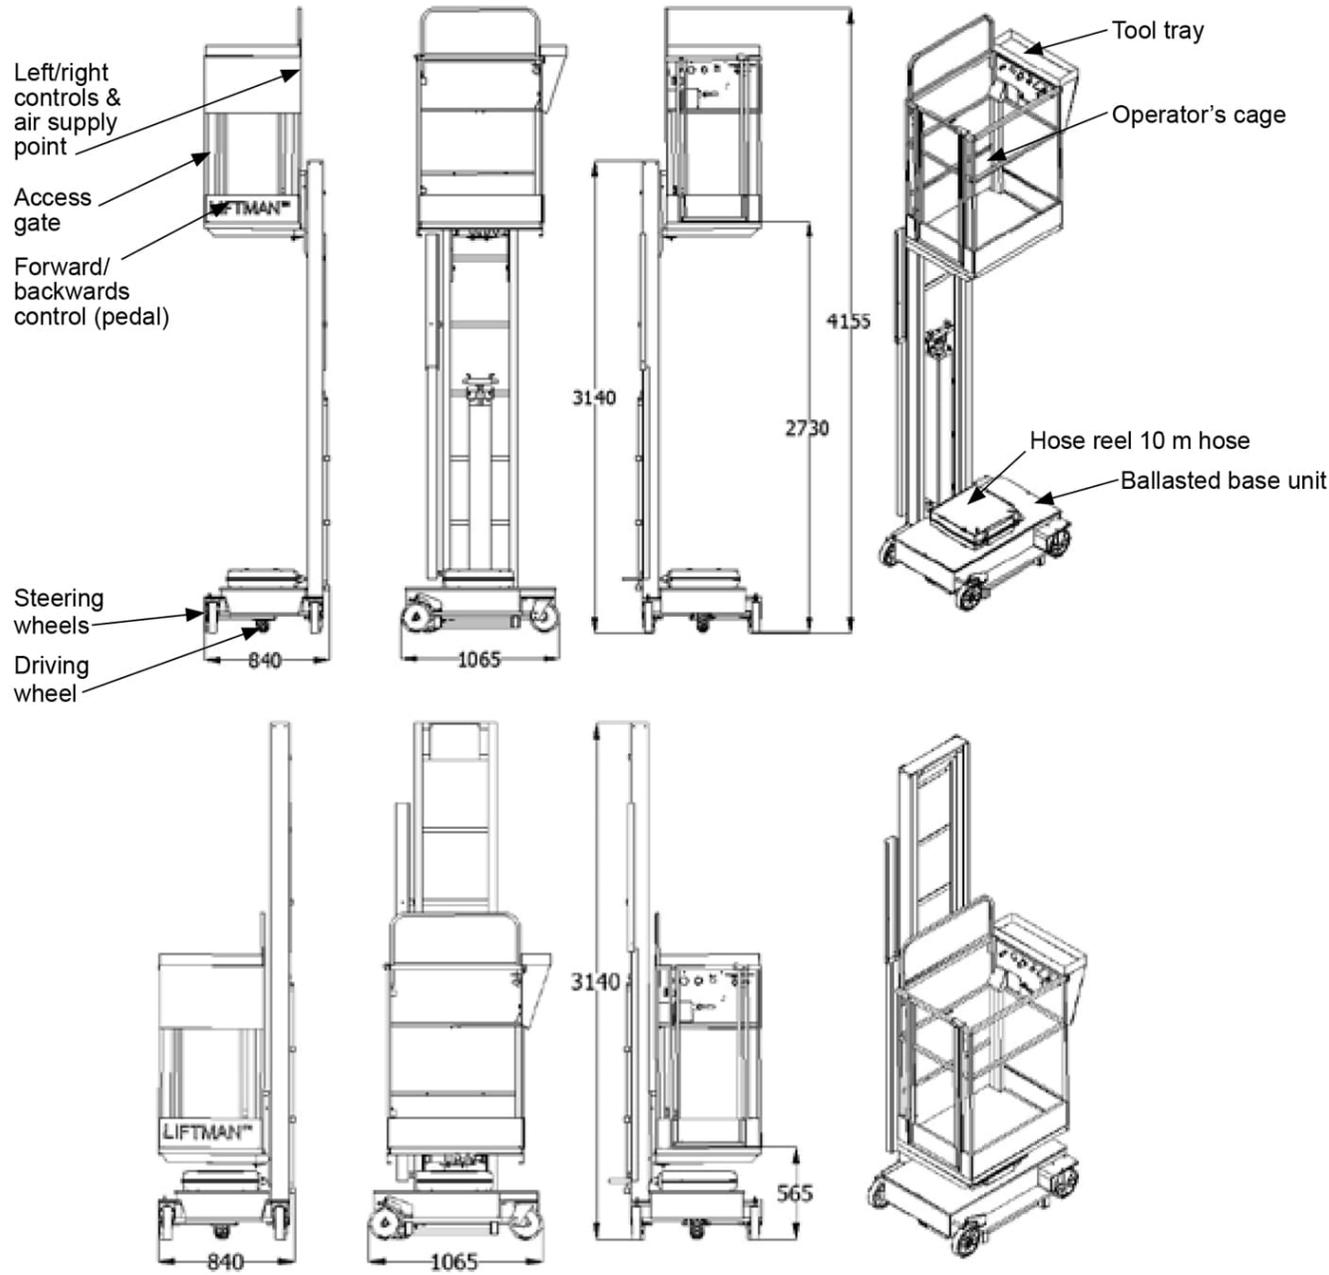

Designed to work within hazardous environments such as for example spray booths, where gases and fumes may be present. Since it runs on compressed air only, there is no source for ignition. Jobs such as painting, masking, adding signs, applying decals, or making repairs on high-sided vehicles or objects can be done with greater speed and safety than normally possible using stepladders or scaffolding.
